As depicted in Table 1 and Figure 1, current average tuition and fees at Illinois community colleges are nearly one-third the average tuition and fees at Illinois public universities ($14,662) and one-ninth the average tuition and fees at private universities ($42,897).

Public university tuition and fees for first-year students increased 2.8 percent (+$398) from fiscal year 2022 and 8.0 percent (+$1,081) from fiscal year 2019. Note that entry-level tuition legislation requires that tuition charged to a first-time, under-graduate public university Illinois resident student must remain at the same level for four continuous academic years following initial enrollment or for the “normal time to complete” undergraduate programs that require over four years.

Figure 2 illustrates the different cost for tuition and fees for community colleges versus other available in-state higher education options during 2019-2023. Individuals interested in a bachelor’s degree can significantly reduce their costs by completing the initial two years at their local community college.

The latest available FY 2023 comparative data show that tuition and fees at Illinois Community Colleges are $286 (5.8 percent) less than average community college tuition and fees in the Midwest ($4,890). Tuition and fees at Illinois public universities are $2,922 (24.9 percent) more than the Midwest average ($11,740). The average tuition and fees at Midwestern private institutions is not available (<https://research.collegeboard.org/trends/college-pricing>).

Illinois’ community college FY 2023 tuition and fees are $744 (19.3 percent) higher than the National average of $3,860. The National average is brought down by California, which enrolls nearly one in five of the nation’s full-time community college students, where community college prices are unusually low ($1,430). Nationally, the average tuition and fees at public universities is $10,940 in fiscal year 2023, which is 25.4 percent lower than the Illinois average and 6.8 percent lower than the Midwest average. The entry-level tuition policy at Illinois public institutions contributes to elevated Illinois figures. At private institutions, the average tuition and fees nationally is $39,400, which is $3,497 (8.2 percent) less than the Illinois average (<https://research.collegeboard.org/trends/college-pricing> and IPEDS Trend Generator).
